The Rushworth's Garden
85 Linden Tree Lane, Chatham

Paula and Duncan Rushworth purchased their one-acre property in 2000 and began planting soon thereafter with the goal of adding a new garden or feature every year. Their first endeavor was a planting of H. macrophylla along the spacious front veranda which now overlooks sun-loving plants, including a border of H. paniculata 'Phantom'. Among their other gardens are a colorful mixed border with a rustic stone wall and stairway as well as a shade garden featuring hosta, ferns, clethra, and viburnum. A sunny butterfly garden sits under a trellis covered with Lonicera 'Major Wheeler' honeysuckle attracting hummingbirds; a hydrangea garden tucked under a white pine tree is planted with H. macrophylla, H. paniculata, H. quercifolia, H. serrata, and a H. petiolaris climbing up and over an old apple tree trunk. The back patio is home to a collection of beautiful plantings in containers. This is the first time this garden will be on tour.

East Orleans in Town Garden

209 Main Street, East Orleans

Diane & Brian McGurk bought this historic home in the East Orleans village in 2015. They saw the potential for restoring the old garden beds and adding more ecofriendly beds. One goal was to eliminate some lawn and develop an environment friendly to nature. The property has amazing trees-alder, weeping beech, Kousa dogwood, and a wonderful Norway Fir that provide a backdrop for a variety of perennial and pollinator gardens. The gardens also have over 50 hydrangeas that were restored by Linda Coven of Strictly Hydrangeas. Raised bed vegetable gardens were added in 2022. The varied gardens and trees offer a place to sit and enjoy nature in an in-town setting!

July 12

Pat McDonald's Garden

244 Rolling Hitch Road, Centerville

Pat McDonald is an avid reader, a retired teacher, a proud mom, and a grandmother of seven, whose extensive and ever-changing gardens reflect these life experiences. Her property illustrates many children's literature themes through her choice of plantings and garden art. Her Snow White moon garden features Annabelle across from a row of Nikko Blue hydrangeas, and her shady Harry Potter firebox area is home to hosta, astilbe, ladies' mantle, and more. Watch for surprises in her mature perennial beds as they Make Way for Ducklings, feature Mary's little lambs' ears, and even the Three Little Pigs. A sensory rainbow garden, next to a rose garden, boasts colorful lilies, tasty nasturtiums, and other fragrant plants to delight the senses. Lower-level gardens include annuals for cutting and four raised beds of organic vegetables and herbs, blueberry bushes, pumpkins, and Jack's beanstalks. A storyteller will be in the garden to entertain young visitors.
